ASSASSINATION IN SAN FRANCISCO.

EDITOR DE YOUNG SHOT DEAD IN HIS OFFICE

A Son of Patron Kalloch the Assassin.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—Charles De Young was shot and and killed at 7.30 o'clock this evening by I. M. Kalloch, son of the Rev. I. S. Kalloch, Mayor, in the Chronicle office.

WEST POINT AFFAIRS.

The Secretary of War Does not Approve of Gen. Schofield's Course.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Secretary Ramsey is not pleased with the order that General Schofield has issued complimenting the cadets at West Point and condemning the newspapers. He will not be interviewed or express his opinion for publication, but it is known that he considers General Schofield's action premature and unwarranted, and will take occasion to notify the General to this effect. The Regular Army officers at the War Department have attempted to divert the attention of the Secretary of War from this subject, but the Secretary has his own ideas on the subject, and very decided ones. At the proper time he will be heard from, but will not say or do anything until the investigation is concluded. He has not approved of General Schofield's course in any important action with the outrage on Whittaker.

GLADSTONE TO THE FRONT.

He Designates Himself Chancellor of the Exchequer.

LONDON, April 23.—The News prints the following prominently: "Mr. Gladstone kissed the hands of the Queen on his appointment yesterday, as First Lord of the Treasury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer."

Gladstone went to Windsor Castle this evening in obedience to royal command. He started alone at 5 o'clock, and was loudly cheered when he entered the train. He will return to London tonight by train, leaving Windsor at 8:15.

On the return of Gladstone to London he was met by Lords Granville, Hartington and Wolverton and Mr. W. P. Adam. Mr. Adam informed a representative of the Press Association that Gladstone had undertaken to form a Cabinet.

FORTUNE BAY FISHING OUTRAGES.

Reparation Refused by the British Government.

LONDON, April 23.—The negotiations between the United States and Great Britain relating to the Fortune Bay (N. F.) attacks on American fishermen ended a few days ago in the refusal of the British Government to recognize the justice of the American claims.

Lord Salisbury replies to the demand of the United States for $101,000 damages by a positive refusal to pay or to recognize the justice of the claims. He takes the ground that the United States fishermen in drawing their seines from the shore were transgressing the privileges granted them under the treaty, which Lord Salisbury holds does not include in the term "shore fishing" the right to land for the purpose of drawing seines from the shore.

He also holds that in fishing with seines the American fishermen were violating local laws, which were in existence, when the treaty was concluded, and which therefore marked the conditions subject to which Americans received their rights and privileges.

Under the treaty, he admits that no local act regulating fisheries which was passed subsequent to the treaty would affect the treaty rights of the United States, but insists that the United States accepted fishery rights subject to all local acts and regulations in force at the time.

Salisbury's answer containing this refusal was forwarded to the United States Government some days ago.

FROM IRELAND.

Tenants Resisting Ejectment.

DUBLIN, April 23.—A despatch from Sligo states that, on an attempt to serve a process of ejectment upon the tenant of a small holding in the interior of Sligo County, a large assemblage of the people gathered, and notwithstanding the efforts of several priests, together with a detachment of armed constabulary, drove off the officer of the law, and successfully protected the tenant from the service of the paper. There was a great amount of noise and excitement, and in the struggle numerous slight wounds were received on both sides, but, as far as heard from, no one was killed. After the constabulary retired with the process server the crowd quietly dispersed.

Kellogg's Case.—The Opening of the Debate.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The Democratic Senate caucus having decided, though by the close vote of 17 to 11, to take up the Kellogg case without further delay, Mr. Bailey (Dem., Tenn.) formally opened the attack this afternoon in a carefully-prepared written speech. The course adopted was opposed by many of the cooler-headed Democratic Senators, and it can scarcely fail to bring a heated partisan discussion. The Republican Senators profess to be ready and anxious for the fray.

THE CRISIS IN ENGLAND.

Lord Hartington has Another Interview with the Queen.

LONDON, April 24.—Lord Hartington paid a second visit to Windsor Castle this morning, in company with Earl Granville. It is understood that they united in making an effort to induce her Majesty to act in the spirit of the Constitution, and follow the customary precedents in such cases, by laying aside her personal dislike to Mr. Gladstone and entrusting him with the Premiership, as the undoubted first choice of a great majority of the leaders of his party for that office. Both Lord Hartington and Earl Granville, it is said, assured the Queen that neither feels in a position to undertake the formation of a Government with Mr. Gladstone left out of it, and that in case the latter does not go to the Lords for any reason, no other Liberal leader will be likely to accept the Premiership with the alternative of ignoring Mr. Gladstone altogether, or of offering him a subordinate office in the Cabinet. They remained over an hour in consultation with the Queen at Windsor Castle, and by invitation of her Majesty also lunched there. It is believed that a decision respecting the formation of the new Government has been at last reached, and that the Gazette of tomorrow will contain the official announcement of the resignation of Lord Beaconsfield and his colleagues, and of the selection of their successors.

SECOND DESPATCH.

On arriving here from Windsor this afternoon, Lord Hartington drove directly from the railway station to Mr. Gladstone's house where he is now consulting with him. The rumor is that the Queen, still stubborn, declared that Mr. Gladstone should be satisfied with a peerage, and that Lords Hartington and Granville should be able to make him consent to this. But if he refuses, the formation of a government with him at its head is certain.

Battle in Afghanistan.—Important British Victory.

CABUL, April 23.—General Stewart entered Ghuzni on the 20th instant, after a successful battle the day before, in which the Afghans lost more than a thousand men killed. General Stewart's loss was seventeen men killed and one hundred and fifteen wounded.

SPOILING BUTTER IN THE MILK.

The report of the Hampshire Franklin and Hampden Agricultural Society's committee on butter and cheese, has this pertinent re-statement of facts that can never be left unsaid while we have so much spoiled milk and bad butter:

"Between the cow and the butter maker there is a point which cannot be too carefully guarded—the way in which the milk is drawn from the cow and handled before it reaches the milkroom. A very large part of the poor butter made results from the milk being spoiled before it is even strained. One lot of butter examined at the fair showed this at once; it was not fit for any use as food. Some, on tasting it, would have said 'animal odor.' Perhaps so, but not from the cow. If the cow is healthy, and has good food and pure water, there can be no odor or taste to the milk in the udder at all objectionable. Nor will there be if the milk is then drawn from a well-cleaned udder by a clean milker, in pure air, and kept from all sources of taint. Others would have said this butter was 'cowy.' Don't lay such a charge to the poor cow; she did her part faithfully. The butter we complain of is not cowy; it is horsey, or piggy, or, worse yet, filthy. The cow-keeper and milker are the persons to blame.

Let every butter-maker who has any regard for the reputation of his or her product, insist upon every possible precaution being taken by the milker to keep the milk pure and clean. No really good butter can be expected if the milk is taken from any unclean beg, or by a milker with dirty hands or clothing, or if the milking is done in a filthy or ill-ventilated stable, or the milk allowed to stand, even a short time, surrounded by impure air. It is the greatest mistake to suppose that if dirty or foreign matter gets into the milk, careful straining will remedy the evil; the object may be removed, but the taint remains. It must also be remembered that there are invisible things as sure to spoil milk as those we can see. There are now improved implements which greatly protect the milk, guarding against carelessness and accidents, but nothing will take the place of careful, cleanly milking."

PERSONALS.

.....Messrs. Moody and Sankey will soon hold a short series of revival services in New Orleans.

.....Mrs. Edmunds, the wife of the Senator, will sail for the United States with their daughter on the 8th of May.

.....Colonel Bodine has been appointed captain of the American Rifle Team, which is to shoot a match with the Irish Team.

.....Mr. G. W. Childs is proposing to build a new home for his Ledger newspaper, the plan of which is to be selected from a number submitted by the best architects in the country.

.....Dr. Schliemann has written to say that he has finished the excavation of Troy, and that there are remnants of several cities clearly discernible underneath the one immortalized by the Grecian epic.

.....General Garibaldi is to have a charming gift from the Italian colony at Montevideo, in the shape of a miniature steamer of ten tons burthen, fitted up elegantly and luxuriantly, and called the Lion of Caprera.

.....Dr. F. S. Smith has been engaged to deliver the poem at the coming anniversary of the alumni of Brown University. Dr. Smith is the author of numerous hymns, including "My country! 'tis of thee;" and "The morning light is breaking."

.....President Chadbourne of Iowa College lately during his vacation visited some gold mines in North Carolina, brought home several specimens for thorough examination and tests, and will make a report giving his opinion as a geologist

.....Senator Edmunds is a very exacting man, but is held in great esteem by most of his associates. It has long been the practice of some Senators to take their bills to him for approval before introducing them. Sometimes he will change a comma, a word, or a sentence, but when the bill he has seen comes up for action he is pretty sure to favor it.

.....M. Lopinay, the engineer engaged in the task of investigating the question of a canal connecting the Bay of Biscay with the Mediterranean, running from Bordeaux to Narbonne, has drawn up his report. His project allows the journey across the Isthmus to be made in 18 hours, making a four days' gain over steamers. The estimated cost of the canal would be $110,000,000.

.....Gen. Grant, in a letter written to Gen. Logan, Governor Cullom and others of Illinois, accepting an invitation to visit Springfield, pays a generous tribute to the memory of Lincoln, "to whom I was personally so much indebted for constant support through all detraction, though an entire stranger to him except officially. Later I came to know President Lincoln intimately, and my appreciation of his great ability, noble and generous nature and forgiving disposition increased with acquaintance."

AMERICA ON THE SEA

The resorts of American representatives in Central and South American urge very strongly the establishment of American lines of steamers to those countries. In Central America there is a line of American sailing vessels which is doing a good business, but the British have a monopoly of the steam carrying trade. So successful, indeed, has this become that the proprietors of the Atlas Line have decided to establish a direct line of steamers between New York and the Columbian ports. There is a large enough carrying trade to render competition successful, and there is no reason why America should not enter into it. Along the coast of South America there are also splendid opportunities for an American line of steamers and the people of Peru express a strong desire for one. It is a somewhat singular fact, that despite the increasing prosperity in all other branches, American shipbuilding seems to be almost at a stand still. There is a demand for American bottoms, but they are found in few ports of the world, and other nations, notably the English, have assumed the supremacy of the seas. It surely should need no further plea to prick the sides of the intent of American shippers when our own consuls abroad send conclusive proof of the profit that awaits American ships in foreign waters.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

To neglect the state is but another way of neglecting one's family. Good government is one of the bulwarks of a happy home.

Fifteen years ago there were sittings for 39,000 persons in the Nonconformist churches of London. Now there are 122,000 sittings, and thirty new chapels are building with a capacity of 1,000 each, while money is in hand for twenty more of the same size.

Boston can take a back seat. The new shibboleth of "culture" is now uttered in New York. Referring to the members of the English "Salvation Army," the N. Y. Methodist says: "We hold that persons who have not mastered the use of the letter h cannot possibly be called to proclaim Christ in the streets." Oh! my hi's?

The Watchman suggests that Orthodoxy is not quite so nearly fossilized as some of its opponents imagine: "For a dead creed it seems to be uncommonly lively, gets itself taught in numerous theological seminaries, is preached from thousands of pulpits, is formulated in confessions of faith having wide acceptance, raises vast sums of money, is the life of colossal missionary enterprises; in short, is the only form of aggressive Christianity on earth."

The chaplain of the Auburn State Prison, Rev. William Searles, says: "There are in the United States forty-four prisons with an average of one thousand prisoners, making forty-four thousand criminals, with an average of ten relatives afflicted by each; making four hundred and forty thousand who suffer from this source. The long line of sorrow could be traced to one of three causes; viz., idleness, licentiousness and intemperance."

A Presbyterian elder describes the process of paying a church debt by a church fair as follows: "Now, brethren let us get up a supper and eat ourselves rich. Buy your food. Then give it to the church. Then go buy it back again. Then eat it up, and then—your church debt is paid." True—too true; but what fun is there in giving a dollar in cold blood, compared with meeting your friends for a social time, eating a good supper in jolly company, and being wheedled out of two dollars by a bevy of pretty girls?

Perhaps a library is the noblest monument which a rational man could desire. The names of "Astor" and "Lenox," with several others, are sure to be honorably perpetuated. The greatest hotel-keeper in Newport in 1880 will be forgotten, while the Quaker, Abraham Redwood, who gave £500 for the foundation of the library which bears his name, is now a great deal more widely known than he was in 1788, when he died. In the same way, as a matter of course, will be remembered Mr. Levi Parsons, of this city, who has given $50,000 to establish a public library for the towns of Gloverseville and Kingsborough. There is nothing of the sort in the history of human culture like the multiplication of valuable libraries in America. We are best pleased to consider it of good omen. There is a deal of trash gets into these collections, but there must also be many books which it becomes everybody to read. Librarians tell us that there is a proportionately small but still steady demand for works of actual merit; and perhaps it is better to read trash, provided it be not immoral, than to read nothing.—[N. Y. Tribune.

WILL IT COME TO THIS?

I shall not live to see it, but fifty years will not elapse before smoking is permitted everywhere. Smoking carriages will be no more needed on railroads than reading carriages. A person, whether in church, or in a law court, or in a drawing-room, will no more ask permission to smoke than to breathe. No one accustomed to the smell of tobacco objects to it, for it becomes imperceptible. Every one, consequently, should bring up their children in an atmosphere of tobacco smoke, so as to accustom them to it from their earliest childhood. If I were blessed with daughters I should seek out no Irish nurse for them and insist upon her smoking every day in the nursery a certain amount of the strongest tobacco from a short clay pipe. In after years my daughters would not render themselves objectionable to the male sex in general, and their father in particular, by declaring that they could not endure the odor of a cigar or a cigarette.—[London Truth.

NEW WORDS.—While many words once in common use are now nearly obsolete, few persons are aware how large a number of new words are constantly coming into our language. The Supplement of the new edition of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, recently issued, contains among other attractive features, an addition of over 4000 new words and meanings, and yet it is but a few years since a general revision was made and great care taken to insert all the words then properly belonging to the English language. Where these words come from and what they are, is a surprise to persons who have not examined them. That they have not been hastily compiled is evidenced by the accuracy of and careful study given to their etymology and definitions.

Newport Daily News, and the Newport Journal.

The Newport Daily News is published every afternoon (Sundays excepted), at the News building, 137 Thames street, by Davis & Pitman.

The Newport Journal is published at the same office every Saturday morning and contains a selection of the best matter in the Daily, including editorial discussions of the topics of the week, literary miscellanies and at least one good story, the latest markets and a complete and comprehensive summary of the news,—local and general. The Journal is a large 32 column paper and contains a large amount of reading matter that is valuable to readers in town or country who desire a good Newport paper, but who do not take a daily from this city.

Complaints regarding the irregular or improper delivery of either paper should be sent to the office at once.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

The Daily News, $6 per annum, or 12 cents a week, payable to carrier.

The Newport Journal will be sent to any address in the United States, postage paid, for $2 a year. A discount of 50 cents is made when the WHOLE YEAR is paid STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

These terms are invariable.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Ordinary advertisements, $1 a square, for the first insertion, and 25 cents for each continuance. Ten lines, or less, in this type, make a square. Advertisements in reading matter, are charged for, at 50 per cent. extra and are subject to editorial revision. A discount on these rates is allowed on all advertisements ordered in the Daily for one week or longer. Funeral notices 50 cents each. Yearly advertisers are limited to their immediate business and are allowed twenty-five changes a year. The circulations of the News and Journal being necessarily distinct, an advertisement inserted in both papers will reach entirely different sets of readers. As further inducement for advertisers to use both the News and Journal, a liberal discount on the combined rates is made.

PRINTING.

Connected with the News is a large and well appointed job printing office. All orders for work in this department will be promptly filled, and at reasonable prices. The patronage of the public is respectfully solicited.

The job office has recently been supplied with new type and a new press, especially adapted to fine work. Liberal supplies of choice papers, envelopes and cards, always on hand. Prices as low as possible for first class work.

Newport Daily News.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1880.

Announcements for Tomorrow.

There will be no evening service at Zion Church.

Rev. J. H. Heywood, of Louisville, Ky., will preach at the Unitarian Church.

Rev. Warren Randolph, D. D., will preach at the Shiloh Baptist Church at 8 P. M.

The time for evening service at most of the churches has been changed to half-past seven.

Rev. Angelo Cenoli, the newly-appointed minister at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, will preach morning and afternoon at the usual hours.

There will be a celebration of the holy communion at the regular morning service at Trinity Church. The early communion at Kay Chapel will be omitted.

At the Second Baptist Church, preaching at 10.30 A. M., and 3 P. M. Morning subject "The Lamb of God." Afternoon, "The Spiritual Farmer, or Lessons from Seed Time." Praise and conference meeting at 7.30, subject for Bible talk, "The Call of Gideon and the Miracle of the Fleece."

A little snow fell last night for the sake of variety.

When Boston boys have a specially vicious kitten they name him Geo. Wm. Curtis, because he too is a great scratcher.

Philadelphia has adopted the contract system of street cleaning, and has saved money by it. But there is now a wrangle about the method of assigning the contracts.

At the third trial to elect a representative to the General Assembly, in Providence, Col. Geo. H. Brown will be the Democratic and Prohibitionist candidate against Mr. Tobey.

The Senatorial controversy over the late Caleb Cushing's legal opinions on the claims of the Insurance Companies to a share in the Geneva award developed the fact that he had given opinions on both sides of the same question. It was a way he had.

The Prohibitionists of Connecticut in convention, have nominated George P. Rogers of New London for Governor, and elected delegates to the Prohibitory Presidential convention. Massachusetts has also sent a delegation to the national convention.

A new corporation has been organized under the English laws, to be called the American Exchange in Europe, with a capital stock of $1,000,000 for the accommodation of travellers and emigrants from Europe. A branch office has been established in New York.

The Georgia Republicans in convention yesterday selected delegates to Chicago after a hot contest, fourteen out of the total of twenty-two being colored men. Of these the Grant men claim twelve, but the general estimate is eight for Blaine, eight for Sherman and six for Grant.

The Englishmen appear to be nearly as much excited as the restless Frenchmen by a crisis of government. England has often laughed at the commotions of France, but there are political surprises which startle even the British Lion. Just now the excitement is getting to be intense.

The Cabinet yesterday, was in consultation about the coming visit of the King of Siam to the United States. There was some talk of sending a naval vessel to bring him from England, but it was stated that the entire party, including servants, will be larger than can be accommodated on a man-of-war. The King of Siam had better be left to paddle his own canoe.

Cadet Frank B. Andrews, who testified at West Point that he had objected to cadet Whittaker falling in next to him, was appointed by Representative Baker, and hails from Steuben county, Indiana. Mr. Baker is both surprised and indignant at Andrew's conduct, and attributes it to his training since he entered the academy. Andrews's father is a minister and pronounced Republican.

Whether Horatio Seymour will consent to be a candidate or not cannot yet be found out. We published yesterday a statement of E. H. Roberts, a personal friend of Mr. Seymour, who says he can in no case be induced to become a candidate. On the other hand we read that the Hon. Dewitt C. West, president of the Utica and Black River Railroad, and one of Governor Seymour's confidential friends, is reported as saying that no living man has authority to decline the nomination for him. Although not a candidate in the sense of seeking the office, Mr. West confidently believes that if the nomination is unanimously tendered to Governor Seymour, he will comply with public sentiment and accept the nomination.

Senator Blaine's attention having been called to the resolution adopted by the Virginia Republican Convention, requesting him to accept the place of Vice President on the Grant ticket, he said that he should not, under any circumstances, accept the second place on any ticket, and that if a copy of the resolution was officially sent to him he should publicly decline having his name so used. The Maine Senator goes in for the main chance.

Mr. Bergh has been trying to stop the exhibition of horses jumping through a ring of fire in Barnum's circus in New York. Mr. Barnum maintained that the horses liked it, and that it was harmless, which he proved by jumping through the rings himself with his clowns, and the latter eating it with great apparent relish. Mr. Barnum says the flames are made from chemicals which produce but very little heat, and the horse is made fireproof by being saturated with alum water and other chemicals.

The Commercial Bulletin's mail reports from Europe represent the weather there very favorable to a large wheat crop and a consequent downward tendency in prices at the principal markets. It is, of course, too early to say positively whether these favorable atmospheric conditions will continue long enough to bring forth the yield which is anticipated, but the probabilities are that way and American farmers had better be prepared for nothing more than an ordinary demand for grain from the other side of the Atlantic.

The results of Denis Kearney's teachings are more apparent every day. It brought the notorious and disreputable Kalloch to the front, and now the son of the Mayor of San Francisco has shot dead Editor De Young for words printed in the Chronicle. The feud between the Kallochs and the De Youngs has been very bitter and it will be remembered that this is not the first shooting that has been done. Free speech and free pistols may be necessary for a free people but there are limitation that should be fixed to both the use of the press and the pistols. When a community gives up itself to demagogueism the people must suffer.

The New York Evening Mail says: There is a peculiar similarity between Mr. Tilden and Mr. Parnell in their political relations. Each insists in thrusting himself on his party, the only effect of which is to split the party and weaken its chances of success. The moderate Home Rulers are crippled more or less by the stubbornness of the fanatical Parnellites, and Mr. Tilden's candidacy would do more than anything else to defeat the Democratic party. Its defeat is fore-ordained anyway, but might be rendered much less disastrous by the substitution for Mr. Tilden of some man who has at least the respect of his constituents.

The political situation in England is still in doubt. The Boston Transcript puts it thus: The "Empress of all the Indies" does so hate to call Gladstone to the front that she is engaged in a Utopian effort to keep the acknowledged Liberal leader in the rear. Accordingly, she summoned Lord Hartington for the purpose of forming a cabinet. He very naturally recommended that Gladstone or Granville be consulted. The Queen, so it is said, authorized the noble lord to see them both. Neither Granville nor Hartington would undertake a ministry without Gladstone. It would have too unsubstantial an existence. It would be too much an "unreality" as the London Times asserts. The Liberal chiefs understand the "situation," and their firmness will probably compel Victoria to that course in the end she should have cheerfully adopted in the beginning.

Charles Francis Adams, as a politician, is not only laid on the shelf, but so securely deposited there that the public can conceive of no circumstances likely to again bring him to his feet. The Springfield Republican shouted itself hoarse in keeping his name before the people, and barely succeeded in preserving his memory. Now and then he speaks for himself, and people listen as to a man of the past who has returned to take part, for an hour, in the discussions of a living age. Just at present the ancient sage is discoursing on independence in politics, which means, being interpreted, opposition to Gen. Grant. No Adams could ever vote for Grant or even speak a word in his favor. The ex-President was not born an aristocrat, and no deeds of his on the field, or in statesmanship, can atone for that misfortune. And so Charles Francis Adams comes out of his hiding place to call upon men likeminded with himself to be so far "independent" as to oppose the re-election of the man whom all the world delights to honor. Mr. Adams seeks to afford his disciples the comfort they need, and to show them how a minority may rule. He states the case in this wise, and says: "In the state of New York, as nearly as can be estimated, forty-five men out of every hundred who vote can be counted upon to vote the Republican ticket, and forty-five more to vote the Democratic ticket. The other ten men in a hundred constitute an unknown element. These ten men we believe we can make fourteen. If we can, we are masters of the situation." And so Mr. Adams hopes to have the fourteen men in a hundred.

A NEEDED INVENTION.—Mr. Samuel Smith recently had an exhibition of his fire escape which was experimented with from the upper story of the United States Hotel, at Brooklyn, N. Y. He was honored with a large number of official visitors and over 5,000 spectators who gathered in front of the Municipal hotel to see the trial. Fifty persons went through the escape in 14 minutes. The members of the Fire Department and members of the city government who were present were loud in their praises of the novel invention and congratulated Mr. Smith upon his successful experiment. A trial will take place in New York at an early day when the escape will be suspended from a seventh story window, an escape 60 feet long being made expressly for the occasion. A company has been formed under the name of the "Crockett Fire Escape Company" and an act of incorporation under the laws of the state of New York has been applied for. Agencies will be established in the Western states. All the escapes for the Eastern and Middle states will be made in this city under the superintendence of Mr. Smith, who is the general agent, and Mr. William Riggs.

The firm is doing a large amount of work this spring in fitting the summer houses in their charge for occupancy. The painting, papering, &c., is done under their direction.

On Monday May 3d the steamer of the Wickford line will leave Newport at 5 o'clock instead of 5.30 in the afternoon and will arrive from Wickford at 7.50 P. M. instead of 8.10 as now. The change is made necessary by changes in the running of the Shore line railroad, by which the time between New York and Newport will be reduced twenty minutes.

SUPREME COURT—MARCH TERM.

EIGHTH DAY—AFTERNOON.

The court came in at two o'clock this afternoon, Judge Potter present.

The trial of the divorce docket being in order was commenced at once.

The divorce petition of Julia E. Spooner vs. Charles D. Spooner was heard and granted.

The divorce petition of Mary Burgess vs. Walter Burgess was discontinued.

The petition for divorce of Joshua Stacy vs. Sarah Stacy, entered in 1873, was today heard, and was contested, Mr. Sheffield appearing for the petitioner and Mr. Peckham for the respondent. After hearing the case Judge Potter granted the prayer of the petitioner and a decree of divorce was ordered.

The petition of Laura A. B. Law vs. Herbert L. Law was heard and granted.

In the case of Philip Grinnell and others appellants vs. the Marine Guano and Oil Company, in which a jury on Wednesday rendered a verdict for the plaintiffs, the defendants were granted until the 10th day of May to file evidence and exceptions for a new trial.

George H. Richardson vs. Jas. H. Hammett et al executors, in which a verdict was rendered for plaintiff for $110.40, is entered satisfied.

The case of the Tiverton Net and Seine Company vs. A. N. Hoxie was continued for judgment.

At 4.30 the court was adjourned to meet again as by law provided, on the third Monday in September next.

The term closed rather unexpectedly as there were cases thought to be ready for trial to have occupied another week, but it could not conveniently be given, and so the parties and the jurors were not sorry to be released to their several vocations at this spring time of the year when all, especially farmers, who have any business at all, are particularly busy. The duties of jurors, however, usually deemed onerous, are, under the rule of Judge Potter, rendered as pleasant as they can be under any circumstances; for, while inflexible in administering exact justice, his considerateness for the comfort and feelings of all connected with the courts, is such as proceeds only from a heart exceptional for feelings of kindness and sympathy towards all men.

A drunken Scotch parishioner was admonished by his parson. "I can go into the village," concluded the latter, "and come home again without getting drunk." "Ah, meenester, but I'm nae popular!" was the fuddled Scotchman's apologetic reply.

GLEANINGS AND GOSSIP.

There fell at Dalton, Ga., not long ago a hail stone which weighed one pound and a quarter.

The Massachusetts state tax this year will be a million and a half of dollars, of which Boston will pay $619,110.

Governor General Lorne's ink bottle was made from the hoof of the charger that carried Lord Clive through the Crimean war.

During the past week thirteen large steamships have sailed from Liverpool for this country, loaded with emigrants.

A man in Buffalo has been granted a patent for a device to test the explosive quality of petroleum by means of electricity.

A census of the Society of Friends shows that it has about 88,000 members, of whom 66,850 are in the United States and Canada, 11,725 in England, 3,948 in Scotland, and 3,500 in other countries.

An examination of the pictures recovered from the ruins of Madison Square Garden shows that about three-fourths of them did not sustain any serious injury, and some of them scarcely bore a scratch.

The world-renowned short-horn cow, the First Duchess of Oneida by the Tenth Duke of Thorndale, belonging to the English Lord Skelmersdale, has died of congestion of the liver. She was bought by Lord Skelmersdale in 1873 for $30,000.

"The race which was good enough to heap its shin in the trenches of Fort Wagner and to follow Bartlett in the deadly charge in Louisiana is good enough to be educated at West Point, without any slights as to where it shall 'fall in' beside the white comrade."

There is such complete agreement now between the Philadelphia Park Commission and the Permanent Exhibition Company as to afford reason for belief that the building can be maintained in the park for many years, and become in fact, as well as name, a permanent institution.

It would be interesting to know how much Windsor Castle has, from first to last, cost. In 1830, on the vote for $500,000 to defray the expenses incurred by the alterations of Windsor, a member objected on the score that $4,500,000 had already been spent, and there was no knowing when the expense would cease. The bill was withdrawn for the time. Enormous sums have since been expended.

THE MILITARY ACADEMY AT WEST POINT.

The Military Academy at West Point has had a history of which the country has just reason to be proud. The people of the country are proud of the school and are in favor of its continuance. Congress has provided liberally for the support of the institution, and when a few years ago a disposition was manifested in some quarters to cripple the Academy through inadequate appropriations, the voice of the people and of the press in all parts of the country protested against this unwise action.

From time to time charges have been made that the tone of West Point was unhealthy. It was declared to be undemocratic and tending towards monarchy. The public paid no attention to these charges because it was thought that what was declared to be an undemocratic feeling was simply a desire to do things in order and with the decent regard for superiors which is necessary to the existence of every military organization.

The Whittaker outrage has been a revelation to the people of the United States. The war is over fifteen years. Negroes have been made citizens, and elected to be Representatives in Congress and Senators of the United States. The Republican party has had a great deal of the patronage of West Point, and has had through the Executive Department, which it has controlled, the discipline of the academy. And yet there appears to be a more bitter "anti-nigger" feeling at the West Point Military Academy today than exists in any portion of the country, not excluding the slums of our great cities. The dangerous and reprehensible feature of the matter is that this feeling appears to be fostered and developed by the military authorities of the academy. Boys will be boys. They will have likes and dislikes. But their superiors and teachers should do all in their power to destroy race hates and moderate the result of personal and class dislikes.

General Schofield and his subordinates have acted unwisely in dealing with the Whittaker outrage. They have allowed their political and personal feelings to warp their judgment. If they had been in league with the enemies of the military academy, and desirous of doing all in their power to injure the institution before the country and the world, they could not shape their course more directly to that end. Gen. Schofield's "General Order No. 14" should not have been issued pending the investigation. When the guilty person has been found it will be time to congratulate the cadets on their good conduct. The trial or investigation has not been properly conducted. The bias of the members of the Recorder has been too plain. The snubbing of District Attorney Townsend was uncalled for. Civilians have some rights in this country, which even military men are bound to respect. The head of the army is a civilian, and a military man who should be elected President of the United States would become a civilian on qualifying for the highest office in the country.

It is with no desire to be censorious that these remarks are made. They are made in sorrow not in anger. We are well wishers of the West Point Military Academy and we do not like to see it placed in a false position by those whose duty it should be to see that its fair fame is untarnished. West Point has enemies. Its friends should be careful not to place weapons in their hands. —[Graphic.

PHENOMENA OF THE WESTERN TORNADO.

Professor Tice of St. Louis, who went to Marshfield, Mo., to investigate the phenomena connected with the storm of Sunday night, reports that everywhere along the track of the hurricane there is evidence of a wave of water flowing in the rear of the cloud spots. These waves or currents flowed in the greatest volume up hills. There are places where the entire top soil is washed away by the currents. Fibrous roots and tufts of grass show their direction to have been up hill, and, which is significant, from all points of the compass toward the top of the hill where the tornado was raging at the time and expending its force. No trace at any point can be found where they flowed down hill. Many level places are swept clean of soil. Leaves, grass, debris of wrecked buildings and fragments of planks carried along by the current and left in the track, arranged themselves longitudinally to the current. Mr. George Gilbert of Marshfield says that he and his wife and four children were on a visit eight miles in the country, and the centre of the tornado passed within five or six yards of where they were. A wave of water, apparently fifteen feet high, rolled in the rear of the point of contact of the cloud spot with the earth. It rolled over them in a second, and was very cold, drenching them thoroughly. About two miles northeast of the town stones weighing from 500 to 700 pounds were lifted out of the earth and carried along some distance in the track of the storm. J. H. Williams, Presiding Justice of the County Court, says that a stone fell on the premises of H. Rose, the weight of which was estimated at two tons. It is not known from whence it came. The tornado, so far as is known, began in Arkansas, and in the stone country was very severe.

DEATH OF GEN. REVERE.

Brigadier General Joseph W. Revere, who died on Tuesday at Busche's Hotel, Hoboken, was sixty-eight years old and a native of Boston, Mass. The Revere House in this city was named after his grandfather, Colonel Paul Revere of Revolutionary fame, and in the late struggle between the states two members of the same family as himself lost their lives—one at Antietam and the other at Gettysburg. General Revere's life was full of adventure. He received his first warrant as a midshipman in the navy from General Jackson in 1828. For twenty-two consecutive years he served with distinction in his chosen profession, and participated in the wars waged by his country against the pirates of the Gulf and of the Indian seas. He was one of those who pursued the Seminoles in the everglades of Florida, and in California. During the war with Mexico, he hoisted the first American flag ever spread to the breeze on the north side of the Bay of San Francisco. In the Mexican war he commanded a company of mounted rifles, which rendered noteworthy services. In 1850 he resigned his commission as lieutenant in the navy and went to live in Mexico as a ranchero on a large estate which he had purchased during the war. His love of excitement soon led him into the service of the Mexican Government and while in command of an armed vessel in the Pacific Ocean he rescued from captivity and death sixteen Spanish citizens whose vessel had been stranded on the coast of the Gulf of California. He received a gold medal from the city of Cadiz, and Queen Elizabeth conferred upon him knighthood of the royal order of Isabel in testimony of his "eminent services." This was in 1852. At the breaking out of the civil war in the United States, General Revere offered his services to the Government. In the summer of 1861 he accepted the colonelcy of the Seventh Regiment New Jersey Volunteers. He took part in the battle of the Peninsula, and was especially commended for his conduct before Richmond, and received honorable mention for his gallant behavior at the battle of Manassas. He was wounded, and shortly afterward was appointed general of the Third Brigade of the Second Division, Third Corps, and commanded it at the battle of Fredericksburg. He was transferred to the command of the Excelsior Brigade of the same division. He led his brigade at Chancellorsville, but after the engagement was over he made the movement for which he fell under the censure of his superior officer. In May, 1865, he was arraigned and tried before a general court martial ordered by General Hooker. General Revere pleaded "not guilty." The court found him "guilty of conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," and sentenced him to be dismissed from the military service of the United States, and the President approved the sentence. He leaves a widow, one daughter and two sons.

THE MAGAZINES.

GOOD COMPANY, ($3.00 a year; Springfield, Mass.,) Number Eight, opens with a story by Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis which is not lacking in her usual vigorous touches. The other stories are A Tale of the North Shore and Not in the Curriculum, both from new contributors. Barberry Island of the last number is followed by The Schoolmistress on Barberry Island, equally attractive in quaintness. A readable paper on Archery as It Is is by Maurice Thompson, the well-known authority on this subject. E. S. Gilbert contributes one of his fascinating articles, entitled Spring Flowers, which gives evidence of much familiarity with them. Mr. George M. Towle writes interestingly of Castelar, the Spanish statesman, and Edward Abbott gives some account of Mary Carpenter, and the devoted English philanthropist, whose visit to this country some years since will be recalled. There are also Getting Breakfast at Bruges, The Preacher in Print, As to Family Newspapers, and other articles.

ST. NICHOLAS For May opens with an important Talk with Girls and their Mothers, by Washington Gladden, and contains the first installment of Noah Brooks's new serial for boys—a base-ball story, entitled The Fairport Nine, and finely illustrated by Redwood. Of complete short stories there are five, all with pictures: Topsyturvy's Dream, a fanciful tale by Edgar Fawcett; The Boy and the Giant, a Bible story retold by Susan Coolidge; Sally's Soldier, a Decoration-day story, with pictures by Zogbaum; Two More of the Major's Big-talk Stories, being a sort of modern Munchausen adventures in the desert of Sahara, with comical and spirited illustrations; and A term at the District School, from a girl-scholar's point of view. There are two Natural History articles; The Story of Lizbeth and the Baby, and Curious Facts Concerning Ants, with illustrations. Louisa M. Alcott's serial, Jack and Jill, describes how Frank and Gus ran away with a locomotive engine, and what fun the boys and girls had on Washington's Birthday, with tableaux vivants, music, and a feast. Oriental Jugglery, an illustrated paper, tells of some wonderful tricks and feats by Hindoo jugglers. A. D. 1095 explains, with the aid of pictures, an interesting piece of history. How to Care for the Sick is a practical article, giving young folks clear and safe advice concerning nursing, how to act and what to do in a sick room. There are, besides, an out-door poem by Lucy Larcom; a humorous piece on Ancient History, by Margaret Vandegrift, with illustrations by E. B. Bensell; some funny pictures by L. Hopkins; and two drawings by Addie Ledyard.

A SURPRISED SAILOR.—Captain Fengar, of the United States revenue cutter Ewing, tells a good story. Coming to anchor in Annapolis harbor one dark Sunday night, he found a schooner lying there with no light on her mast. The captain of the schooner, fearing that he would be reported and fined, at once put off in a boat, and coming alongside the cutter hailed the officer of the deck: "Say, Cap, can't you lend me a lamp for my white lantern? Mine dropped out and fell overboard last night." "We don't keep a lamp shop," growled the lieutenant. "Then what shall I do? Somebody may run me down in the dark, and anyway I'll get reported." "Do?" said the lieutenant, "why don't you take a lamp out of your red or green lantern? You are not using either." "But it's a white light I want," said the skipper, "a red one won't do." "Well, put it into your white lantern, you lubber." The skipper did not seem satisfied, but pulled back to his vessel, took the lamp from his red lantern, lighted it, and put it into the white one, and then the officer on the deck of the cutter heard the following exclamation across the water from the puzzled sailor: "Well, I'll be gal darned if that aint the most curis thing I ever seen."

A SEVERE CRITICISM OF AN ARTIST.

Mrs. General Custer has written a letter to Mr. Daggett of Nevada in opposition to the bill providing for a statue to General Custer, to be executed by McDonald, the artist of the West Point statue, and to be erected in Washington. She says McDonald erected the statue of General Custer now at West Point military academy without consulting her or any of her friends. Commenting upon that work she adds:—

"The statue could not be worse than it is. The face is of a man of sixty, and the dress is so unmilitary that his brother officers shudder in looking at it. He is represented with a full dress coat, and top boots that only belong to undress uniform. The whole costume is incongruous and incorrect. There he is, armed like a desperado in battle, while some of the General's best charges were made with no firearms about him. I realize that I am the last one on earth to be satisfied with any representation of my husband. Nothing could portray to me in any form my idea of him; but his friends in civil life, his comrades in the army, and artists, all have but one story to tell—that the statue is a failure as a likeness, as the representation of a soldier, as a work of art. You know what intense individuality General Custer had: his quick movements, his active step, the very way he wore his clothes, was so totally unlike any one else. He could not fail to be well represented if a man of genius once tried to represent him. It seems as if I could not endure the thought of this wretched statue being repeated, and I hope that your voice may influence those upon whom the decision rests."

WISDOM.

Frequently review your conduct and not your feelings.

Tears, like rain-drops, have a thousand times fallen to the ground and come up in flowers.

Innocence is a flower which withers when touched, but blooms not again, though watered with tears.

There is enjoyment even in sadness; and the same souvenirs which have produced long regrets may also soften them.

Stories first heard at a mother's knee are never wholly forgotten—a little spring that never quite dries up in our journey through scorching years.—[Ruffini.

It is a great advantage to keep quiet, gracefully and naturally. Self-control is the best evidence of a cultivated intellect and a clear conscience. It is a great pleasure to meet those who wisely listen and observe—who review what is said without prejudice, and with or without advice admit no errors. Nothing is so difficult to do—nothing so rarely done.

Lady Elizabeth Biddulph made a little stump speech in behalf of her husband during the recent political canvass in Great Britain, and was vociferously applauded by an immense audience. Her remarks were as follows:

"Gentlemen, these are election times, and uncommon times, and we are at this time allowed to do things we wont do at other times, so I will make that my excuse for addressing you, and will make you a little speech. Mr. Biddulph cannot be here today but I am here as his wife and representative and I ask you to put him at the head of the poll, and make him a happy man and me a happy woman. He has your interests at heart, and nobody loves the county more than Mr. Biddulph, I declare to you."

EMULSION

COD LIVER OIL!

—WITH—

Pepsine and Quinine

offer this preparation of Cod Liver Oil to the profession, in the confident hope that it will supply a pleasant and efficient medium of administering that invaluable remedy.

It is unnecessary at this date to refer to the very high character which has been borne by the "Caswell Cod Liver Oil" since its first introduction; it is sufficient to state that this oil is used in this new preparation.

The proportion of oil held in the emulsion is fifty per cent.; the finest Turkey Gum Arabic and the purest White Sugar are the other ingredients employed in its manufacture.

The addition of Pepsine and Quinine is made with the view of enabling the most delicate stomach to retain and digest the oil.

THE ONLY POSITIVE SAFE-GUARD

Against DANGER in the use of Kerosene Oil is the

EUREKA PATENT SAFETY VALVE!

Which can be attached to any lamp in a moment by any one and which renders it impossible for any lamp to burst, no matter how great an explosion may take place and however poor the grade of oil may be, for in case of any explosion, it always opens and allows the escape, no matter how or when the fire gets into the oil, acting precisely the same as a safety valve does upon a steam boiler, and will absolutely protect any lamp, burning any grade of kerosene, from five percent to the best, and even these burning naphtha or burning fluid.

A lamp, having these valves on, may explode, while in the hands of children, without the slightest chance of their sustaining any injury, for the instant it explodes, the valve opens and the danger is over; and, if they should happen to drop the lamp, they could never be burned, for, as soon as the explosion takes place, the lamp goes out immediately, and is at once harmless, with no fire about it to burn any one.

Price of Eureka Safety Valves, Either Size, Large or Small, 25 Cents Each.

THE WHITE SEWING MACHINE!

THE BEST.

IT IS SIMPLE in construction, easily managed, nearly noiseless, and so easy to run that a child can use it without fatigue. It has a self-threading shuttle and a tension nearly automatic when once regulated; it will sew the lightest fabrics or the heaviest goods; it has great capacity and power, and is as durable as any machine made. All its wearing parts are case hardened and readily adjusted. See it before you buy. Many ladies now regret that they did not examine it before purchasing other machines.

We have other first class machines of great merit constantly on hand.

We have also a splendid assortment of Pictures, Frames, Hangings, &c., to which we invite the inspection of the public.

Newport Laundry

—AND—

STEAM CARPET BEATING ESTABLISHMENT!

Cor. Warner Street and Pond Avenue.

In connection with the Newport Laundry, we have put up a patent

STEAM CARPET BEATING MACHINE,

by which the carpets are beaten on the back and breathed on the face. The dust and dirt, as fast as beaten out of the fabric are removed from the compartment where the carpets are beaten, by an exhaust fan, which also removes and carries out of the room any moth or other larva, which may be beaten out of the carpet with the dirt and dust, so that there is no possibility of their settling back on the carpet.

Prices for Beating Carpets:

Ingrain and Three Ply.....6 cents per yard
Brussels and Tapestry.....4 cents per yard
Velvet and Wilton.....6 cents per yard

A special price will be made to parties having 100 yards or more done at one time.

As the machine is under cover, carpets can be beaten in storms, as well as in pleasant weather.

English and rag carpets will be washed for six cents per square yard.

Manilla, hemp and rope carpets thoroughly cleaned for from 6 to 12 cents per yard.

Orders may be sent by mail, directed to the Newport Laundry, given to the driver of the Laundry Wagon, or may be left with J. D. Richardson, 213 Thames street, agent for Newport Laundry.

Carpets called for and returned free of charge for cartage.

A Wet Day and its Consequences.

It was a hopelessly wet day, and a party of young people, staying at a large place in the country, looked unmistakably bored as they stood about in the hall after luncheon.

Frank Egerton, the eldest son of the house, turned from a window in disgust.

"There's not the faintest chance of its clearing, so we may as well give up shooting this afternoon. What can we do?" he asked in an exaggerated tone of despair. "Miss Brook, what must you think of our climate?"

"Can't we rise superior to weather, and strike out a new idea?" interrupted Miss Egerton.

"I have thought of something for to-night," he answered. "There's a dance at the Dunstone Asylum. An invitation came for us some days ago." Various exclamations of horror broke from the young ladies as he continued: "We can dance with each other if we don't like the inmates. You will come?" he added, in a lower voice, turning to Miss Brook.

She hesitated.

"I don't know. I never did such a thing before."

"You will probably dance with much saner people than you have done elsewhere, and I believe they have a capital floor."

"It seems so sad," she said. "Does any one go?"

"Old Mr. Hunter, our nearest neighbor, always makes a point of going on principle, and takes any one who will go. I have not heard of him lately, and I don't know if he has people staying with him; but we are a large party ourselves."

"You will think me a coward; but is it safe?" and Violet Brook raised bewitching eyes appealingly.

"Of course; or how could you think I should suggest it? I have never been at their parties myself; but they have lots of them, as they say they do the patients so much good, and have never had an accident. The place naturally is full of doctors and keepers."

"And must we dance with the patients?"

"Not unless you like; but I believe numbers of them seem quite sane, and that you would never find out any difference. The only one I know is a poor fellow who was at Eton with me, who fancies he is the Emperor of China, and has the wildest ideas on the subject—quite incorrect for the character; but if he is humored he is managed with perfect ease."

"What is his real name if it is not wrong to ask?"

"Stapylton. I know nothing of his family or how he went off his head. In fact I have not seen him for years; but the doctor told me about him, finding I used to know him, and of this new fancy of his."

Mrs. Egerton crossing the hall at this moment was eagerly seized upon by her son, and she rather reluctantly consented to the plan.

"Is it really safe," Violet Brook whispered to her.

"Quite. Our doctor has often begged me to go; he says these parties do so much good; but Frank never expressed any wish to go before," she answered, with not unusual maternal blindness, in rather a puzzled voice. "If we do go," she added, turning to the rest of the party, "I do hope you will all behave well."

"Why, mother!" exclaimed Frank, "you talk as if we were children going to our first Christmas tree. Even if we wished to do wrong, I think we should all be too much afraid."

"Yes, indeed," she answered. "I hope you will all, especially you, young ladies, humor them. You do not know what might happen if you were to annoy or excite them in the slightest degree."

Everyone promised to be careful, and a few hours later found them entering the ballroom at the Dunstone Asylum.

Violet felt horribly frightened at first but a valse with Frank Egerton restored her courage, and she looked round her with interest.

"Do you see that poor man," Frank asked her, in a low voice, "just coming towards us with the doctor? I suppose they could not get him to come sooner; but how terribly sad he looks! What cruelty to bring him!"

He was a tall striking-looking man, and Violet continued to watch him, when Frank left her to dance with some one else. While the doctor moved on he remained standing, half concealed by a curtain, watching the dancers with a look of agony.

He seemed so miserably out of place, Violet felt full of pity, and wondered if she dare speak to him. He caught her eye and smiled, such a sad, pitiful smile that all her fear vanished.

"You are alone?" she said.

"Yes," he answered; adding suddenly, "My poor child, do you wish me to dance with you?"

Nothing was further from Violet's thoughts; but she was afraid of annoying him.

"As you wish," she said; "but tell me first who you are," hoping from his answer to find some guide for her future conduct.

"My name is Stapylton," he answered.

"The Emperor of China!" she exclaimed involuntarily, and then feared what might happen; but he only said,

"Am I? Just as you please. Will you sit down here till the next square begins? I never valse."

"That is something to be thankful for, thought Violet, as she obediently took the offered chair.

Mr. Hunter had returned home with some friends the day before, and at breakfast announced his intention of going, as usual, to the dance at the Dunstone asylum.

He was surprised when one of his guests started at the name, and eagerly asked if it was near.

"Ten miles; but why do you want to know Stapylton?"

"I'll tell you afterwards," was the answer; and as soon as they were alone he told him a younger brother of his had had sunstroke in India, which, in addition to other troubles, had completely driven him out of his mind, and that he was now in the asylum at Dunstone.

"I never stayed here before, you know, and had not taken in you were in the same part of the world. I wonder if I dare go and see him?"

"Tonight?"

"Yes. I need not see him unless the doctor approves; but I could not stay here knowing you were there."

"Go this afternoon, my horses want some work."

"Thanks; but I may as well go with you, it is a long journey. I can see the doctor at any rate; and I shall be glad to do so, for I missed my letters abroad, and have not heard anything of my poor brother for some time."

So Major Stapylton entered the asylum that evening with Mr. Hunter, but waited alone till the doctor could come to him. At last he appeared, making a thousand apologies, but slightly annoyed by a visit on business at such a time.

Major Stapylton apologized in his turn for his untimely visit.

"I am afraid you have given yourself needless trouble," the doctor said; "I have inquired, and Mr. Stapylton is asleep. In his weak state he must not be disturbed. He is better, however, and the new delusion I told you of in my last letter quite passed away. If you will call again—"

"Yes, thanks. Don't let me detain you." The doctor turned fussily to the door.

"You see I should not be absent for an instant tonight; but pray do not wait here. Come with me; you will see nothing painful, and Mr. Hunter is so kind, he always stays to the end."

A strange fascination seemed to draw the other from the room, to see the poor creatures with whom his poor brother now passed his life, and he consented.

The doctor, recovering his temper, talked on as they walked to the ball room.

"Nothing painful, I assure you; but if any of them speak to you, be sure to humor them."

As they entered the room, Major Stapylton, rather horrified, shrank back behind a curtain, while the doctor added, as Violet looked towards them:

"Do you see that girl? She is one of our worst cases."

"In white?" Major Stapylton asked, in doubt as to which was meant.

The doctor was suddenly called away; and as Major Stapylton was still looking at Violet, still wondering if it was she, her apparent forwardness in addressing an unknown stranger, confirmed the idea of her madness, while the slightest doubt on the subject was removed when she spoke to him as Emperor of China, he never having heard of his brother's imperial delusion.

They sat together for some moments in silence, till Violet, finding it unbearable, and growing more and more nervous, said,

"I wish your majesty would give me some tea; though I suppose it is not so good as what you have in China?"

"I don't know; but I see some in that room, if you will come with me."

Violet rose, and was surprised by the perfectly self-possessed way in which he gave her his arm, and brought her some tea. Still his sad expression, and the way he treated her, prevented her from guessing the truth.

"Shall we stay here?" he asked. "I cannot bear to see the dancing. I am afraid I cannot dance with you."

"I would much rather stay here," Violet answered, feeling greatly relieved, but thinking to herself, "Poor dear man how changeable you are! I wish I could do you any good." Trying to suit her conversation to him, she continued, "Is it long since you were in China?"

"I never was there in my life!" was the startling answer, while Violet felt frightened as he added confusedly, "at least, I mean—I don't know." And thought in his turn, "Poor girl! I forgot I was the Chinese Emperor. How on earth can I keep up the character?"

Violet hurriedly went on:

"Of course. I understood. I suppose you knew Dr. Smith before, and are paying him a visit?"

Major Stapylton shuddered.

"What! She thinks I am a fellow-patient, then! However, poor Charles is, so she is not far wrong. I wonder if she can talk sensibly;" and he hastily changed the conversation by asking if she had read one of the books of the day.

Violet knew it well, and to her surprise and delight found her Emperor capable of a rational conversation. She had seldom enjoyed one so much. She was very young and had not yet got over shyness with strangers, but why need she be shy with a poor lunatic? So, with the object of pleasing him, she talked without hesitation of her favorite pursuits and books, and answered personal questions without taking any offence.

Major Stapylton, on his side, delighted with the fresh young girl, touched by her openness, and profoundly sorry for her awful misfortune, tried from mingled kindness and curiosity to encourage her almost unconscious revelations of character. "Have you been here long?" he at last ventured to ask.

"About an hour, I think," she answered, not understanding.

"In the ballroom; but I mean how long have you been at Dunstone?"

"O, what shall I do! he thinks I am mad too!" she thought; but her look of terror warned Major Stapylton he was on dangerous ground.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "I had no right to ask. Tell me more of your visit to Italy." And plunging into mutual recollections, they were again delighted with the rational way in which each conversed.

One of the gentlemen of the Egerton party now came and asked Violet to dance, explaining that he could not find her before, and adding in a low voice,

"Will you come, or do you prefer staying here?"

"I would rather stay here, thanks; but please ask Mrs. Egerton if she minds."

"Certainly; but I should think in this case it was all right; and he went off to report that Miss Brook was perfectly happy, talking to a very good-looking lunatic.

Mrs. Egerton, not knowing what was the usual etiquette at lunatic asylums, left her undisturbed, and she and Major Stapylton had another hour of delightful talk: till Mr. Hunter came to look for him, when Violet seized the opportunity to escape. Mrs. Egerton, leaving soon afterwards, she saw her new friend no more.

Frank secured a seat in the carriage opposite to her, and began to reproach her for the way in which she had spent her evening.

"I am sorry if it was wrong," she answered simply. "But the poor man seemed to enjoy talking to me, and I thought it would be cruel to go away. Do you know he is your friend, the Mr. Stapylton you told me of, Emperor of China."

"Is he? I asked one of the attendants, and he told me he was not there. How stupid! I should like to have spoken to him, poor fellow. I did not recognize him; but I see it is the same face, but older and altered in expression. He used to be very clever and popular."

"He is delightful," Violet said. Then, ashamed of such strong praise, added, "Of course I only say so because he is mad. Do you know, he thought I was mad also!"

"A sure sign he was," Frank muttered to himself. "But how did you really get on?"

"O, beautifully. He was quite rational, and the pity he evidently felt for me was most touching."

Full of admiration for his evident abilities, charmed with his manner, and pitying his misfortune, Violet for the next twenty-four hours thought of little but this fascinating madman.

Major Stapylton on his side was in much the same state. He had vainly tried to point her out to Mr. Hunter, and resolved to question Dr. Smith next day when he returned to see his brother. Mr. Hunter told him he had accepted an invitation from Mrs. Egerton to dine with her and bring his friends; and Major Stapylton felt bored by the prospect of going among complete strangers.

"Have they a large party?" he asked, for the sake of saying something.

"The house is quite full, I believe. I knew you would not care to dance, so did not introduce you to any one. Miss Egerton is a very nice girl, and she said she had a very pretty friend with her, a Miss Brook; but she could not see her when she spoke to me."

Major Stapylton felt perfectly indifferent to Miss Brook and Miss Egerton, and went upstairs only longing for the time when he could return to Dunstone.

The morning came at last, and he had a most satisfactory interview with his brother; and was afterwards assured by Dr. Smith that he felt certain of his speedy and complete recovery.

Then Major Stapylton rather awkwardly began his inquiries about the young lady of the night before. "One of your worst cases, you said."

"Oh yes," he answered. "So you talked to her? She is very ill this morning, poor thing, and I think cannot live long."

Major Stapylton felt it impossible to make any request to see her, or even to ask more questions concerning her, only venturing to say, "She seemed in the most perfect health last night."

"Excitement does a great deal in some cases; but I feel sure she will not live through the winter."

Major Stapylton's preoccupation and sadness on his return soon attracted Mr. Hunter's attention and he expressed his fear his brother must be worse.

"No, no; much better; sure to be all right soon, Smith said. The fact is, Hunter, you may think me an ass, but I can't get that girl out of my head I told you of last night. So young and intelligent, and I should have thought so well; and I hear now she cannot live through the winter."

Mr. Hunter did not answer, as his opinion of Major Stapylton was much what he had expected, and the latter, disgusted at his want of sympathy, sauntered about by himself for the rest of the day, thinking of the unfortunate unknown, and hating the prospect of dining out.

Violet Brooks dressed for dinner with very preoccupied thoughts, and profoundest indifference to Mr. Hunter and his friends. Major Stapylton entered the drawing-room decidedly cross, and having been introduced to Mrs. Egerton, looked around the room, and instantly caught sight of Violet, standing at a little distance and looking at him with intense surprise.

He sprang towards her and seized her hand.

"You here!" he exclaimed.

Violet terrified, gave a slight cry of alarm; and Frank Egerton moved towards her.

"O Mr. Egerton," she cried, "it is your friend the emperor."

"What is she doing here?" asked Major Stapylton, bewildered, and dropping her hand.

"Mr. Hunter," Frank called out, as Violet clung to him for protection, "what is the meaning of this? Why have you brought that madman here?"

"My friend Major Stapylton? What on earth do you mean, Frank?"

Major Stapylton eagerly addressed Mr. Hunter: "She is the girl I told you of; one of Dr. Smith's worst cases! Why have they brought her here?"

"Miss Brook mad!" Frank exclaimed indignantly. "My mother took her to that dance last night."

"And I took Major Stapylton!" answered Mr. Hunter, bursting into a roar of laughter, as he perceived the double mistake.

All, even the two victims, were obliged to join in the laughter, and a more hilarious party had never before entered Mrs. Egerton's dining-room.

She, of course, assigned Major Stapylton to Violet; and he thought her more charming, if possible, than before, as they offered mutual apologies, and she explained how she had mistaken him for his brother, and expressed her joy at the hope of his speedy recovery.

Their conversation was continued after dinner, till an impromptu dance was started; and Major Stapylton was left in no doubt as to his state of mind when he saw Frank's empresse manner to Violet

In a pause in the dancing he drew her aside.

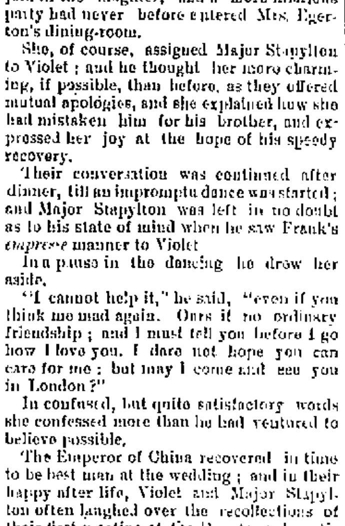

"I cannot help it," he said, "even if you think me mad again. Ours is no ordinary friendship; and I must tell you before I go how I love you. I dare not hope you can care for me; but may I come and see you in London?"

In confused, but quite satisfactory words she confessed more than he had ventured to believe possible.

The Emperor of China recovered in time to be best man at the wedding; and in their happy after life, Violet and Major Stapylton often laughed over the recollections of their first meeting at the Dunstone Lunatic Asylum.—[London Society.

ARTOTYPE!

J. A. WILLIAMS, the original, is ready to take and fill orders for this style of pictures at his room, No 1 Touro block, Bellevue avenue, Newport, R. I. The Artotype process is good enough to satisfy the most exacting and will for this reason receive opposition from none but those who will have lost all opportunity to benefit by its immense advantage. The Artotypes are far superior to Silver Prints or old style Photo made from the same negative with the additional merit of being as permanent as a steel engraving. Artotype is a name given by the proprietor of a patent for printing by means of a process to fatty inks and in colored inks. The price of photo in silver I will take for about one half of the old process or less than any other Photographer charges for the same style of work. J. A. W. a9
